How Jockey and a Gambler Pulled the Strings.

NICHOLS FLED ON THE SIERRA

Rider of Virgie A. Levanted When Exposure Was Near at Hand,

Sec. Nichols, the jockey who rode Virgie A in her race with Aggravation last Saturday, left for the Coast yesterday on the Sierra in company with a man named Edmunds, who was one of the largest winners over the race. With Nichols' departure much of the mystery surrounding Saturday's race is removed, and the affair stands revealed, one of the most barefaced swindles and disgraceful conspiracles ever perpetrated on the Hawaiian turf.

A few weeks ago Virgie A and Aggravation met at seven furlongs, and the former, ridden by Nichols, won with ridiculous ease, Aggravation making no showing whatever in the final three-eighths. The winner was backed for dollars and dimes, and a small fortune was won over the result. Optopio, who rode Aggravation, put up a criminally bad ride, and the opinion of many prominent turfmen expressed without hesitation, was that Opiopio had sold the race to Nichols. One of the biggest winners over the race was 'Soldier" O'Donnell, the Camp McKinley plunger.

A second race between the horses was arranged, this time at a mile, with Nichols engaged to pilot Virgie A, and it was in connection with this that Nichols got in his fine work.

Virgie A is jointly owned by Lleutenant Hamilton, of the Sixth Artillery. and "Al" Moore. "Soldier" O'Donnell, also of the Sixth Artiflery, is an admirer of the mare, and stood ready last week to back her to the extent of his roll, which runs into the thousands. The Country Hard Put for the It was O'Donnell's money that Nichols and his associate were after. To this end the jockey spared no pains to impress on the soldier that Virgie A won the first race on her merits, and was absolutely sure of winning the

The plot went smoothly enough until the morning of the race, when the news went forth that O'Donnell had blow to the conspirators, but it was decided to carry the job through and rake in all the money that could be

With wads of money still unbet at the Aggravation end of the deal, and with the wise ones clamoring and falling over each other in order to secure some of the vile thing, the mag fell.

Nichols started the performance in therough accord with his book, and succeeded in getting the worst of the start in a most flagrant manner. To make matters surer he allowed Aggravation to open up a practically uncloseable gap and passed the quarter pole at least two seconds in the rear. Of course Aggravation won in a walk and Virgle A staggered home in a manner which very strongly suggested a bucket of water or worse, inside her.

Virgie's undoubted speed should have carried her on equal terms with Aggravation to the half at least, and Nichols' instructions from Lieutenant LONDON, April 17 .- The excitement in Hancock were to keep close up and if possible pass Aggravation at the half and take the pole. Nichols was acting as his own instructor in that race, however, and after the race he carefully avoided meeting the Lieutenant. Lieutenant Hancock was astounded at his mare's showing. He bet heavily on her and was naturally anxious to find out the reason for such a startling reversal of form. To this end he commenced a searching investigation, and Tuesday Nichols told a friend that he intended to depart on the Sierra. He kept his word and with him went Edmunds, who hoasted last week that he owned Nichols, and who won over

$1,500 on the race. Nichols was warned off the Oakland track two years ago for suspicious rid-
